RE: How to be a Smart Electric Consumer

DATE: March 11, 2010

I would like to invite you to an informative seminar which is open to the public. This seminar will be aimed at answering questions regarding the recent lifting of price caps. Representatives from the Public Utility Commission and the Office of Consumer Advocate will be on hand to address any questions and explain what this all means to you as a consumer. Also invited are representatives of the supplying companies for our area who will be available to answer questions about their plans.

Pennsylvania's electric price caps are lifted. Do you know what that means for you? Has your monthly electric bill increased? Have you selected a new electric generator? Do you know how to save money on your electric bill? Where do you go to compare rates? Need answers to these questions, then attend my informative seminar: How To Be A Smart Electric Consumer.

With this in mind, I have scheduled this forum for Thursday, March 31, 2010, at the Schnecksville Fire Company. It will begin at 9 AM. For directions, call toll free 1-877-327-4255 or go to senatorargall.com. I look forward to seeing you there!
